WHAT IS THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN PRINCE2 AND PMP?

PRINCE2 is an integrated project management method providing a set of processes and themes that can be tailored and applied to manage any project from start to finish. It provides advice aimed at all project management roles.

PRINCE2 – describes ‘What to Do’

- ✓ A Method
- ✓ Integrated set of processes and themes covering the full project lifecycle
- ✓ Covers all project management roles – including the project board, project manager, team managers, project assurance and support
- ✓ Does not cover interpersonal skills
- ✓ Makes reference to techniques – e.g. suggests that when scheduling activities, Gantt charts might be useful, but does not tell you how to draw one

PMP is based on a ‘Project Management Body of Knowledge’ (PMBok) that covers the broad spectrum of project management competencies and techniques that project managers may need to apply. This PMBoK is that of the Project Management Institute (PMI) a largely US based body. The UK equivalent is APM and their ‘Body of Knowledge’ (BoK) is similar, but not the same, in content. There is an APMP qualification too.

PMP – describes ‘How to do it’

- ✓ A broad collection of ‘good practices’
- ✓ Each topic area can be referred to in isolation
- ✓ Targeted at project managers only
- ✓ Covers interpersonal skills
- ✓ Describes techniques e.g. describes how to go about scheduling
